A patient uniform is a loose-fitting garment made for comfort, accessibility, and hygiene during medical treatment. It typically features:

- Material: Lightweight, breathable fabric such as cotton or polyester-cotton blends that are easy to clean and sanitize.
- Design: Open at the back (or sometimes the front) to allow easy access for medical examinations, procedures, and monitoring.
- Fastening: Ties, snaps, or Velcro closures—usually at the neck and waist—to allow quick removal and privacy adjustment.
- Colors and Patterns: Often comes in light blue, green, or pastel shades with simple prints; color-coding may be used to identify departments or patient types.
- Fit: Unisex and generally one-size-fits-most, although some hospitals offer varied sizes for better comfort and dignity.
- Purpose: Ensures cleanliness, allows easy access to the body, reduces contamination risk, and provides modesty.
