

A pilot uniform is a formal and functional outfit worn by airline and aviation professionals, symbolizing authority, precision, and trust. Typically composed of a white dress shirt with shoulder epaulettes, a dark blazer or jacket, matching trousers, a tie, and a peaked cap, the uniform presents a polished and commanding appearance.

The most recognizable feature of the pilot uniform is the epaulettes, which display gold or silver stripes indicating rank:

- Four stripes: Captain
- Three stripes: First Officer (Co-pilot)
- Two stripes: Second Officer or Junior First Officer

The blazer often carries additional rank insignia on the sleeves, while a metal wings badge or embroidered airline logo is displayed above the left chest pocket. The peaked cap, worn mostly by captains, includes the airline emblem and may feature decorative braiding.

Constructed from durable and breathable fabrics, the pilot uniform is designed to provide both comfort and professionalism during long flights. It not only reflects the pilot’s expertise and responsibility but also reinforces passenger confidence and the airline’s brand image.